To Whom It May Concern,

We want to strongly encourage you to host a National Security Presentation by Understanding the Threat (UTT), including the 3-day “Understanding and Investigating the Jihadi Threat” program. While all four of us were in senior positions in the U.S. Intelligence Community and should have been aware of this information – we were not. We first heard this critical information from the primary presenter. The information is of utmost importance to the security of the United States, is critical to formulating National Security Strategies, and is vitally important to local and state law enforcement and intelligence professionals.

The primary presenter, John Guandolo is a national treasure. He is courageously crisscrossing America sounding the alarm about the realities of the most significant threat to the nation today – the comprehensive threat from the Global Islamic Movement in the form of the Muslim Brotherhood, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, and the Jihadi organizations, and how they weaken our nation to other external threats such as Russia, China, and others. Every citizen in this country should hear what he has to say. The facts he presents speak for themselves and require no commentary. For local and state law enforcement and intelligence officials, this information is critical to identifying, understanding, and thwarting threats in your locale. UTT gives specific details on how to practically implement this information in your area, which directly affects your community and your families.

John is our go-to guy concerning these issues. His research is thorough, fact-based and logically presented. He is only biased by reality. We applaud this man of courage and hope you will make the time to hear this presentation.

Sincerely,

William G. Boykin
Deputy Under SECDEF for Intelligence (2003-2007)

Joseph E. Schmitz
Inspector General, DoD (2002-2005)

Harry “Ed” Soyster
Director, Defense Intelligence Agency (1988-1991)

R. James Woolsey
Director, Central Intelligence (1993-1995)
